

Winter weed control

Posted on December 21, 2010 by Publisher

The Okanagan Basin Water Board (OBWB) will be working hard to control the outbreak of Eurasian Watermilfoil on Osoyoos Laek. The OBWB is hoping to control the growth of the invasive plant by de-rooting it.

Stu Wells, OBWB chair, says removing the plant at the root and leaving it to die in the cold water is the best method to considerably shrink the milfoil bed.

The north end of the lake experienced significant milfoil growth earlier this year, which prompted the Water Board's milfoil crew to focus much of its control efforts in that particular area last summer.