There is a new weapon in the battle to control the invasive milfoil weed in Okanagan lakes.

The Okanagan Basin Water Board says a new rototiller, built by a Kelowna company, should be ready for use by April.

It will be used over the winter along with three older machines, to de-root the weeds.

In summer, the weed is mowed and removed with special harvesters.

Meantime, the Water Board has re-elected Kelowna councillor Tracy Gray as its chair, and Vernon Councillor Juliette Cunningham as vice-chair for 2018.

Both were elected by acclamation.
